Dear Dr. Ryback,

Thank you so much for your presentation on how emotional intelligence is changing the world of business and how people themselves, namely our audience members, could also benefit in their own lives with emotional intelligence.

We were pleasantly surprised at the size of the audience you were able to draw, quite a bit more than our usual numbers. And the response I got afterwards, from those I knew in the audience, showed clearly that they were quite impressed with your presentation.I myself found your presentation quite enthralling, with all the information on both business and personal aspects of your focus. As you may know, my own book, on target-oriented consulting, deals with human interaction from a similar point of view to yours, that people influence one another in a very dynamic sense, and that the responsibility to make independent decisions cannot easily be delegated, in any sense, business or otherwise.

Anyway, let me close by sharing that your presentation was not only quite informative about how people influence one another, even including some neuroscience information, but quite entertaining, especially your personal stories and even your occasional use of humor to make sure the audience was thoroughly entertained for the whole hour that you spoke. People were literally sitting on the edge of their seats during much of the presentation. Finally, you were able to reveal how the world of business is gradually shifting into a more socially dynamic and open mode of interaction. I can highly recommend your talks to any organization that is interested in what is most current in the changing world of business

All the best,
